LACK OF HITS
LOST CONTEST
BY BARE 4 TO 3

Senators Started Off Well, But Weak Stick-ing Bobbed Up Again.

MASON STEADIED DOWN

Weak in First Inning, Then Kept Singles Scattered. Good Fielding.

NEW YORK, 4; WASHINGTON, 3.
Hard luck, relentless in its pursuit, is still after the Senators. It overtook them yesterday when victory seemed safely stowed away in their cellars, leaving them still in the non-winner class with seven defeats.

The manner in which the locals fielded the ball pleased all of those who attended the game, but that same old fault—weakness with the willow, when hits were most needed—invariably cropped out.

Mason Got a Chance.

Young Mason, the New York State League recruit, was sent into the field against the Yankees and Griffith's men threatened to send him back to the minors from the beginning. The first two men uncorked safeties. Later, Williams followed with an infield single, giving New York two runs in the first session, but the young slabman from Schenectady had something up his sleeve, and unloaded it on his opponents.

Not to be outdone, the Senators did things to Long Tom Hughes' delivery, and chased one run across the counting block, in the initial session. Things looked particularly rosy for the Senators. One run had already crossed the rubber, and a man was on second and third with only one out, but McCormick hit a free drive to center, which was gathered in by Ganzel, who caught Stahl off second by a block.

Cassidy Helped.

Cassidy helped the good work along by beginning the second inning with a long swat to left field for three bases. Drill hit to Conroy, who attempted to catch Cassidy at the plate, but the ball struck the sliding youngster on the shoulder and caromed to the grandstand. Drill going on to second on the play. Kittredge drew a base on balls, and Mason struck out. Charlie Moran singled to right filling the bags. Thomey hit to Conroy, who touched third, forcing Kittredge out. He threw wild to first in an attempt to catch Thomey, and Drill scored, but Moran was nabbed at the plate.

Here the Senators' run-getting stopped, although with any sort of luck they should have added several more tallies to their credit. New York scored the tying run in the seventh inning on Beville's two-out, left-center, and singles by Conroy and Fultz. The winning run was made in the following session on Jimmy Williams' three-bagger, and Anderson's fly to Seibach.

Senators' Spry Fielders.

Moran, Cassidy, and Seibach were much in evidence in the field for Washington. Moran made the star play of the day when he pulled down Beville's line drive with one hand in the second inning. He was heartily applauded. While Cassidy made no such phenomenal catch, his work added was clean and fast, and he nipped several runners by his rapid work.

It was planned to strengthen the team at bat by placing Hoffman on the bench, moving Thomey to center, and playing Drill in right. Drill got a hit and a run, and had his team-mates copped a hit in the ninth inning would probably have scumpered over the pan with the tying run. He led off with a hard single over second base, and was sacrificed to second by Kittredge.

Hoffman was in to replace him in place of Mason, and after having two strikes called popped a meanly little fly to left field which was easily taken care of by Anderson. Then Moran took up the bat, and after a futile stab at the ball bumped it down to Williams, who retired him at first. The game was over, and still no additional damage had been done to the Senators' percentage column.

Dwyer Didn't See It.

Mason showed up well in the box. After the first inning he settled down and kept hits scattered. He showed the stuff he was made of by his good and effective work with men on the bases, and pulled himself out of several tight places. In the eighth inning, after Williams had hit to left and scored on Anderson's out to Seibach, he struck out the next three men, but Umpire Dwyer had called for the bench for another bat had his back turned when Ganzel fanned at his third strike and did not see it. Ganzel got a life on first, who Stahl dropped a throw to head him off, but Beville and Hughes fell easy victims to Mason's slants.

Jacobson, the Central League twirler, who arrived here Friday afternoon, was on the bench watching the game yesterday.

HARRY HOWELL, CAST-OFF, WON FOR ST. LOUIS TEAM

DETROIT, Mich., April 23.—Howell, the New York cast-off, pitched great ball against Detroit here today, and St. Louis won another extra inning contest by Burckett's two-bagger, followed by singles by Heidrick and Hemphill. Wallace starred in the field. Love and Woods played their first game with the locals. Padden was banished from the grounds by O'Loughlin for strenuous

COLUMBIAN VERSUS WASHINGTON AND LEE

Locals Will Meet Virginians at Baseball for the Second Time This Season.

Columbian University will again meet Washington and Lee tomorrow. The game will take place at University Park. Seventeenth and C Streets northwest, and will be begun promptly at 4:30 o'clock.

These teams have met once before this season, and Washington and Lee won by the score of 12 to 8, but after Harris was substituted in the box in place of Burckett, who began the game for Columbian, the locals finished the stronger. Harris will begin the game with Columbian tomorrow, and the Orange and Black is confident of victory.

Changes have been made in the personnel of the Columbian outfield, with the idea to strengthen the team in batting, and a big improvement is expected.

RUTGERS PROVES EASY.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., April 23.—Wesleyan knocked Van Sandt, of Rutgers, out of the box, and also pounded Masgr, who was put in his place, winning a poorly-played game with ease today. Morgan did some great batting for Wesleyan, and Rutgers bunched errors. Score: Wesleyan, 13; Rutgers, 2.

GEORGETOWN LOSES TO WILMINGTON

Professionals Down Local Collegians, 7 to 6.

SPURTED IN NINTH INNING

Lucky Bunching of Hits Gave Delawareans the Game in Last Session.

WILMINGTON, April 23.—The baseball season opened in this city today with a great display of enthusiasm. The spectators shouted themselves hoarse, for the home team won by a score of 7 to 6 from Georgetown University. Mayor Charles D. Bird tossed the ball into the diamond. Georgetown put up a fast, snappy game, and it was only by a lucky bunching of hits in the ninth by the professionals that the collegians were defeated.

The local team gives promise of being fast, and with more practice will no doubt be among the leaders of the Tri-State League. Ten thousand people saw the game.
